Air Industries Group Wins Long-Term Agreement for Flight- Critical Components for Blackhawk Helicopters and Order from General Electric for Jet Engine Components, with a Combined Value of $5.0 Million

Bay Shore, N.Y.--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Air Industries Group (NYSE American: AIRI), an integrated Tier 1 manufacturer of precision assemblies and components for mission-critical aerospace and defense applications, and a prime contractor to the U.S. Department of Defense, today announced that it has won two important contracts with a combined total value of $5.0 million.

The Company's Air Industries Machining Corp. (AIM) subsidiary has been awarded a five-year Long-Term Agreement (LTA) to manufacture flight-critical assemblies for the Blackhawk helicopter, with an estimated value of $2.2 million. AIM has manufactured this product for many years. The new LTA extends until December 31, 2027, replacing an existing LTA expiring at 2022 year-end.

Air Industries also said its Sterling Engineering subsidiary has received a new order worth $2.8 million for engine components to be used on the F404 jet engine. This engine, which powers frontline fighters and trainers around the world, has been in production for many years and is being used in the new Boeing-Saab T-7A Red Hawk advanced jet training aircraft.

Mr. Lou Melluzzo, CEO of Air Industries, commented: "We are pleased to announce the extension of Air Industries Machining's longstanding LTA to manufacture assemblies for the Blackhawk helicopter, as well as a new award for Sterling Engineering to supply components for the F404 engine. These contracts from long-established customers clearly demonstrate the strength of Air Industries' existing relationships, which are the foundation of our business."
